Abstract

The trend of social issues and threats specifically addiction has been growing to the extent of becoming one of the greatest concerns to the country authorities. There is no doubt that the role of the individual and social, cultural, economic and political structures in the break out and prevalence of social anomies should not be ignored and has to be very specifically analyzed. Considering a systematic point of view toward the Iran's social system, the current article describes the role of every single cultural, economic, political and social subsystem in the outburst of issues and threats. In the meantime this article describes the methods of intervention for curbing, controlling this social harms. In fact in the presence of a systematic perception toward social life we would realize that each social phenomenon is correlated and dependent to other phenomena. Regarding this intention, reinforcing convergence in governmental bodies and public layers toward social issues could be effective in the improvement of social affairs.
